

ABSTRACT

A valve seat for a cylinder head of an internal combustion engine includes an additional material fused to the base material of the cylinder head. The additional material includes at least two layers above one another, the inner layer, facing the cylinder head, having good joining properties with respect to the base material of the cylinder head, and the outer layer, remote from the cylinder head, having good strength and wear properties.